SDG 16.3.1 :

Provide expert advice to government

Yes, our faculty members play a crucial role in providing advice and supporting the regional or national government, as well as the private sector, by undertaking scientific research.

Our aim is to help those ministries that, due to financial hardship, would not otherwise be able to access such advice. Therefore, our service provides free legal advice to the government and the private sector at both levels across a range of legal and economic issues.

In addition, there are faculty members who provide advice to institutions and private companies. Our College is committed to providing free advice to all local and national parties and appreciates the social responsibility that we hold in the community to fix some of the problems or crises facing these institutions in various fields.

At the end, Our College's faculty members from different departments and schools often participate in various national-level projects, providing all kinds of specific suggestions. Different ministries, county and municipal governments, and NGOs often request that our university's faculty members serve on committees in different capacities to offer policy guidance and professional advice.
