Explanation verb to have

We use the verb Have to express ownership of things (possession), in the simple present tense. Note that: The source of the verb (to have/has) is the word Have. There are two conjugations for the verb Have in the simple present tense, and they are has and have, which mean (he has/has).

We use the verb has (to have) with the pronouns he – she – it – a singular noun (we can write the verb has in abbreviated form like this ('s

To form a question about ownership of things, it begins with does, meaning (does he have / does he have) in the simple present tense,

This is under two conditions:

- 1 - That the answer begins with yes/no
- 2 - That the verb in the answer meaning (to have) is one of the two verbs have or has, and not have got or has got. After these two conditions are met, we form the question as follows:

Do / Does Does + + the subject have have?
